Sometimes inside the most harmless looking people, there lies an underbelly of perverse desires and voracious violence.

Ethan Tillitson's been obsessed with thirty-one year old Danielle Martins for several years now. Ever since he laid eyes on her he's been infatuated with her beauty. When Danielle politely declines a lunch date with him, Ethan refuses to take "No" for an answer. He continues following and watching her from afar, and with plenty of skill to fly under the radar of local law enforcement.

But when Danielle meets handsome contractor Mitchell Conway and the two start dating, Ethan becomes enraged and begins taking his sick obsession to the next level. He starts to harass not only Danielle, but those around her, including her best friend. Since no evidence connects to Ethan, the police handle the matter with indecisive restraint.

While Danielle and Mitch continue their whirlwind romance, Ethan simply watches and waits. He's got a plan, an awful plan. And just when Danielle and Mitch think that Ethan has given up, and that they can finally start to get on with their lives, he puts his plan in motion. In an instant Danielle finds herself in uncharted territory where one wrong move could mean the difference between life and death, and she'll have to turn her feelings of helplessness into rage just to survive.
