Slowing Military Change Zhivan J. Alach

The author looks at the development of military technology. He examines three major platforms: fighter aircraft, tanks, and cruisers, examining the gaps between generations as well as the capability gains of each succeeding type. While development has slowed, at the same time capability increases have also slowed: it takes longer to get new equipment, and it is less improved than its predecessor was over its own predecessor. Only in electronics and IT was that shown to be somewhat untrue, but even there military technology has lagged significantly behind commercial advances. This relative military stasis, in technology at least, has a range of causes. The author also looks at the strategic environment to see whether that has evolved rapidly while technology has proven more dormant.
