Joanna is the widow of Loukas, her beloved who died fighting pirates on the Great Sea. Decimus is the Roman senator who rescued her and her adopted daughter from slave runners, and he's also the man who has fallen in love with the graceful and resilient woman.

Joanne craves solitude in which to mourn. Senator Decimus Varitor returns to Rome with reluctance, bound to the senate for too many more years. However, he can only tolerate being away from her for a time. Decimus searches for her in the wilds of Israel where she hides from the world.

She leaves the camp, not knowing she and her friend Rebecca will never live there again. A search for ten-year-old twins in a driving rainstorm through the wilderness, Rebecca's illness, and then her adopted daughter's injury at the paws of a bear force them to Jerusalem.

When Decimus finds her, she is following another man, Jesus. His heart broken, Decimus must return to Rome alone.

Anne Baxter Campbell combines her love of history with her desire to walk readers one step closer to the Lord. The action-packed historical romances of The Truth Trilogy are published by Helping Hands Press. The Truth Doesn't Die is the third in the series. The first two, The Roman's Quest and Marcus Varitor, Centurion, are available through bookstores online.

Anne also collaborated with eleven other authors to write Kathi Macias' 12 Days of Christmas, seven others to write Summer in Sweetland, and has two other series with other authors on their way for the upcoming holiday season.

She lives in north central California with her husband Jack, one sweet little dog named Meggie, and one imperious black cat who comes to the name of Cleo when she feels like it.
